

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

The House Committee reports an attendance for the past year of 44,275 as against 38,856 for the previous year, which is an increase in the average daily attendance from 106 to 121, or nearly 15%. This is equivalent to a daily visit from one in eight of the resident members compared with one in nine the year before, certainly a sign of wholesome interest in the Club. The figures of the table service show a steadily increasing use of that department of the Club, 2186 more meals having been taken. The tendency toward increase in breakfasts and luncheons continues and their numbers is rather larger than that of dinners. The total receipts of the Club, apart from dues, have been larger than the previous year by $5,107.

Although Bishop THOMAS UNDERWOOD DUDLEY had been a member of The Century but a few years at the time of his death, and although the field of his chief activity lay in a distant part of the Union, he had a large circle of acquaintances here and in the city, where at one time he was prominently engaged in the missionary service of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Dr. Underwood took up his life-work at a relatively mature age. Previous to his ordination as Deacon, at the age of thirty in 1867, he had been professor of Latin and Greek in the University of Virginia, in which State he was born, and had served during the term of the civil war in the Confederate army, in which he enlisted at the outbreak of the conflict. Within eight years of his ordination, he was consecrated as Assistant Bishop of Kentucky, and on the death of the venerable Bishop Smith, in 1884, he became Bishop. He was especially interested in missionary work among the negroes of the South, and was connected, as Chancellor, with the famous University of the South at Sewanee, Tennessee. He was widely known and sincerely respected in all parts of the country, and did much to strengthen that bond of unity between the once warring sections, which consists in the zealous pursuit of common moral and religious aims.

WILLIAM COLLINS WHITNEY was but five years out of Yale College, and three years from Harvard Law School, when, in 1868, he was elected to The Century. He was not yet thirty, and was "Will" Whitney to a considerable circle in the Club, the survivors among whom recall him as "the most winning and lovable of friends," and withal as possessing a peculiar physical beauty of a type not common among Americans. He had first entered upon the practice of law with the late Judge Abraham R. Lawrence. He had much skill and energy and resource in his profession, and rapidly built up a practice in which large corporations were his clients, and in which his acute business judgment and his gift for the management of men and affairs were as important as his knowledge of law. He early engaged in politics, with a strong predilection to the Democratic side. It was in his blood, his father, a Massachusetts man, having been chosen for important offices by President Pierce and President Buchanan. Young Whitney's first active part in public affairs was in the fight against the Tweed Ring, in which he formed a creditable and effectual association with Mr. Tilden, to whom his acute intelligence and foresight were especially attractive. After the downfall of the Ring, he allied himself with the County Democracy, and in 1875, he was appointed to the office of Corporation Counsel, which he held continuously for nearly eight years. He found the office overwhelmed with the defense of claims against the city, several thousand in number—"the driftwood of Ring times," as he subsequently described them. He started with the "presumption that everything was fraudulent," and when he resigned the office in 1882, he had cleared them, almost without exception, from the way. It was a laborious and valuable service, and he had a right to look forward at its close to the resumption of his private practice for an indefinite period. But the campaign of 1884, with its peculiar issues and the novel chance of undisputed victory for his party for the first time in a quarter of a century, made an appeal to him he could not resist. His summons to President Cleveland's Cabinet was the natural sequence of his remarkably efficient party service.

He accepted the appointment as Secretary of the Navy, to which department Congress had finally devoted appropriations sufficient for constructive work. Though the youngest man in the administration, it is no exaggeration to say that his achievement in it was the most important of the next four years. Secretary Whitney laid firm and broad the foundations on which a really great superstructure was erected, and determined standards and methods that have since been maintained and developed. When he left, the country had a real navy, and the assurance of a powerful one. On his retirement Mr. Whitney engaged in the development of urban passenger roads, of which the Metropolitan street railway system is the chief example, and in kindred enterprises, in which he acquired a large fortune. He did not return to politics, save for the campaign of 1892, to the success of his party in which he contributed invaluable aid and direction inspired by rare unselfishness, and for a brief interval, in 1896, when he made a desperate effort to save his party from the disaster he foresaw, and from what he regarded as disgrace, worse than disaster. In later years he gradually withdrew from the large business interests with which he was connected, and devoted his time to his racing stables, to the acquisition of rare and beautiful works of art, with which his unique mansion was filled, and to the care and embellishment of his large estate in the Adirondacks, in the South, and elsewhere.

He died suddenly on February 2d of last year, leaving a host of friends sincerely mourning what seemed his untimely end.

DANIEL FULLER APPLETON was identified from early boyhood with the trade in which he attained such signal success and reputation. Born in Marblehead, Mass., in 1826, he came to this city on attaining his majority, having been trained by an elder brother, and entered business with Mr. Robbins, joining him a few years later as partner in the firm of Robbins & Appleton, which in 1857 secured the works, then small, in Waltham, Mass. There was rapidly developed the extensive watch factory with its marvellous variety of mechanism of precision which has since become known the world over. Mr. Appleton was early interested in the Republican party, was one of the delegates to the first convention of that party presenting a Presidential ticket—that of Frémont and Dayton, in 1856,—and was one of the founders of the Union League Club, and afterwards its Vice-President. He was also a prominent member of the Grolier Club, and a successful collector in the lines of that organization.

ABNER W. COLGATE, at the time of his death, had withdrawn for some years from the extensive business interests with which he was long and honorably connected, the Atlantic White Lead Company, which he founded, being the chief. After his retirement he devoted the energies which failing health left to him to charitable work of a systematic and intelligent sort, and to the cultivation of artistic tastes and gifts, which he possessed in an unusual degree. He was a painter in water colors of marked skill, and a student and amateur practitioner of architecture. One of our architect members writes that "at the fall of the Campanile di San Marco in Venice he was so struck by the diagram prepared by Mr. Colgate, covering certain features of interior construction designed to prevent any possible recurrence, from causes within the structure itself, of a calamity everywhere deplored, that he introduced the designer and his project to the architect charged with the restoration of the famous tower." Mr. Colgate was also intensely interested in the study of astronomy, and had built at his country home in Morristown a well-arranged observatory, in which he passed much of his time.

The death of THOMAS L. GREENE, in the prime of his manhood, was a real loss to the community and to this Club, in which he had many friends. Born in Albany, in 1851, he entered the office of his father, one of the pioneer managers of the Boston & Albany R. R. system, and from there passed to the West Shore road. Later he became a writer on finance and business for the New York Evening Post, and in 1895 was appointed Auditor of the Manhattan Trust Company. On the organization of the Audit Company of New York, he became its Vice-President and General Manager, in which very responsible post he had ample scope for his trained intelligence, sound judgment, and acute reasoning, to which his sterling integrity and impartial temperament gave peculiar value. His volume on Corporation Finance is a model of comprehensive knowledge, searching analysis and original generalization, adding to the authority he possessed among those familiar with his rare attainments. In a time of some confusion and much illusion his mind worked with great precision and with a singular grasp of essential principles. In private life he had the charm of modest strength and sincere kindness.

CHARLTON T. LEWIS had been a member of The Century two-score years at the time of his death. He was distinguished by unusually brilliant attainments in varied directions. Scholarly gifts may be said to have been his birthright, and scholarly work in mathematics and in the classics at once his occupation and diversion. Graduated at Yale at nineteen, in the famous class of 1853, when he was elected to The Century in 1864 he had already filled several pastorates in the Methodist Episcopal Church, had held the chairs of mathematics and of Greek at Bloomington, Ill., and at Troy, N. Y., and had acquired a considerable practice in the law, his specialty being insurance, which he continued to develop until his death. He found time for four years of editorial work on the Evening Post with Mr. Bryant, and was its editor-in-chief after his death. In connection with Dr. Vincent, he translated the then important theological work, Bengel's Gnomon of the New Testament, and issued a history of Germany. His chief labor in the line of scholarship was his Latin Dictionary, published by Harper's in 1879, a production regarded by experts as monumental in extent and authoritative. He received the degree of Ph.D. from the University of New York in 1877, and that of LL.D. from Harvard in 1903.

To his distinction in classical scholarship, in the higher mathematics, and in his profession, Dr. Lewis added a strong claim to the gratitude and esteem of the community through his remarkable services in the cause of enlightened treatment of the class which furnishes the inmates of our prisons. He was for many years President of the New York Prison Association, and devoted to its work most unselfishly and constantly his vigorous mind and rare gift of convincing advocacy with pen and voice. He believed profoundly that "the true criminal, the habitual or congenital enemy of society, must be disarmed and that the true use of the prisons is to entomb this small class not for a year or for a fixed term, then to be released to prey on mankind, but permanently as long as the character is unchanged," but that the great majority of the so-called criminal class could by aid and guidance and restraint or liberty conditioned on behavior, be restored to usefulness. It was a noble ideal, for the fulfilment of which Dr. Lewis wrought incessantly and effectively. His aspiration was not in vain, to quote his own lines, to

"leave behind
Some hope that cheers mankind, some faith that saves,
Some wisdom as their guide among our graves."

There is a grim, almost grotesque, irony in the fate that couples so generally the name of "LARRY" HUTTON with the collection—remarkable as it is—of death masks which he gathered, sifted, and gave to the Princeton University. That an individuality, so vital, so cheerful, so brimming over with courage and energy and light-hearted challenge of any and every fortune should so conspicuously be associated with a sort of memento—interesting and revealing, no doubt, but redolent of the charnel house—is a queer trick of the Providence that shapes our ends. His friends—their name is legion and many among them are of The Century list—will prefer, one likes to think, to remember him in some part by those faithfully wrought and ingenious "Literary Landmarks" of London, Edinburgh, Oxford, Venice, Florence, Rome, even Jerusalem, for the marshalling of which his keen and sincere interest in letters was the motive. In still greater part, perhaps, they will remember him by his numerous and sympathetic appreciations of players and plays which were the outgrowth of his catholic, yet discriminating, love of the things of the stage. But more potent even than these in keeping fresh his memory will be the knowledge, obtained in direct intercourse, of his sound and sweet character, the loyal kindness of his friendship, the generous bestowal of his rare gifts.

FREDERICK S. TALLMADGE's membership of The Century dates from the remote period when its home was on Broadway, and he was something of a veteran when the Club removed to what is now by tradition "the Old House" on Fifteenth Street. At the time of his death there were but two members his seniors, Mr. Huntington, elected in 1846, and Mr. Durand, elected in 1847. He was essentially of the type of old New Yorker. He was born in 1824, in Vesey Street; his father had served as Recorder for twenty years, as well as in Congress, in the State Senate, and in the city government. His grandfather was the famous Colonel Benjamin Tallmadge of the Connecticut Dragoons; his grandmother, Mary Floyd, was the daughter of William Floyd, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Tallmadge was graduated from Columbia College in 1845, and entered the profession of the law, being for many years of the firm of Noyes, Tracy & Tallmadge. Though his career as a lawyer was one of marked success, he found time to indulge fully his literary and social tastes. He was a discriminating collector in the line of Shakespeariana, and the drama and Americana of the Revolutionary period with which his family association was so close. A member of the Society of the Cincinnati, he was one of the founders of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution, for some twenty years its President and always devoted and energetic in the promotion of its aims. One of the latest acts of his life was the signing of the contract for the purchase of Fraunce's Tavern where, a hundred and twenty years before, his grandfather had listened to the noble and pathetic farewell address of Washington to his officers.

HENRY ROGERS was born of New England colonial ancestry in this city in 1820. He was for many years active in the work of the Episcopal Church, being at the time of his death Manager of the Seaman's Mission and the New York Bible and Prayer-book Association, and a member of the Trinity Church Association.

The death of Lieut.-Col. WRIGHT P. EDGERTON, U. S. A., in the prime of life, was a severe loss to the Military Academy, where he was Professor of Mathematics and where he served, in all, nineteen years. Graduated in 1874, he served in the artillery on garrison duty at ten different stations, in a half dozen different States; for thirteen years he was successively Assistant Professor and Associate Professor of Mathematics at West Point, and this varied army and academic experience was of great value in his subsequent career. His keen interest in active service is shown by the fact that in June, 1898, he "by persistent effort succeeded in being assigned to duty in connection with the transportation of troops from Port Tampa to Cuba." He was later engaged in the campaign in Porto Rico, on the staff of Major-General Miles. At West Point he was deeply and intelligently interested in athletic sports, and was for a number of years President of the Athletic Association. In the general order announcing his death, Brigadier-General Mills says:

"He was an accomplished officer, devoted to his duties, an inspiring teacher, loyal to his superiors, considerate of his subordinates, courteous to all—a type of man and soldier of which the Military Academy is justly proud. All who have come in contact with him socially or officially will ever remember his genial personality, his courteous manner, and the perpetual charm of variety which made him so delightful a companion. In his death the country, the army, and the academy have cause to lament the loss of a noble character.”

EDWARD W. LAMBERT had been a valued member of The Century more than thirty years at the time of his death, and left among us a large circle of attached friends, for his direct, kind, and loyal nature easily won and richly repaid friendship.

Born in Boston, in 1831, Dr. Lambert graduated from Yale in 1854, and studied medicine with the late Dr. Willard Parker. In 1859, early in his career as a physician, his interest and co-operation were enlisted by Mr. Henry B. Hyde, in the formation of the now famous and powerful Equitable Life Assurance Association, of which he became at the outset Medical Director, and of which, at the time of his death, he was the sole survivor of the original officers. The work was difficult and exacting, and many of its delicate and complex problems were unsolved, with relatively few precedents to serve as a guide in their solution. By indomitable perseverance, close study, acute judgment, and intellectual and moral fidelity of a rare sort, Dr. Lambert became a master in his department. The task was one to test character as severely as intellect. It involved dealing not only with large interests, but with multitudes of men in intimate relations. Candor and kindness, an open mind and a talent for inspiring confidence were required, and in these Dr. Lambert was amply equipped. To them he added a cheerful and genial disposition, and it is no exaggeration to say that the great army of the Equitable's agents was an army of his devoted friends. After nearly forty-five years of continuous service, Dr. Lambert, in February of last year, was made Consulting Medical Director of the Society.

By his associates in The Century the touching tribute paid to him by his friend and ours, Dr. Edward Curtis, will be recognized as appropriate:

"By the death of Dr. Edward Wilberforce Lambert, the world is the poorer by one of that type of humanity whose example can ill be spared, the man without an enemy, the man whose every acquaintance is a friend. Plenty enough are they who are courteous and kind when the occasion is thrust upon them, but what of him who goes out of his way to find the occasion—who makes it, even for kindness' sake and it may be to his own disadvantage! Such manner of man was Dr. Lambert, and that his soul may find the rest due a long and blameless and beautiful life is the heartfelt prayer of one who for many a happy year toiled close within its radiance."

JOHN ROGERS was elected to The Century somewhat late in life, and it was only for a half-score years that his commanding form and genial presence were known in our rooms. But he was for the greater part of his long life a prominent and original personality in the artistic circles of the city. He had the varied experience and versatile capacity of the native Yankee. Born in Salem, Mass., in 1829, he was successively merchant's clerk, machinist, sculptor, surveyor, and again sculptor. To the latter occupation, for which his "call" was unmistakable, he came late; his first attempt being made at the age of thirty. He spent a year abroad in Paris and Rome, but when he returned to this country in 1860 he took up the practice of surveying, feeling his way in art rather timidly. A little group, "The Checker Players," brought him sudden and unexpected popularity. Then came the Civil War and opened a rich field for his peculiar talent. No other artist, perhaps not all others, can be said to have been so intimately associated with the intense feeling of the time, or so happily or fully to have expressed it. His compositions, multiplied in plaster, were found in thousands of homes the land over. From "The Slave Auction," in 1860, the last year of peaceful agitation of the mighty issue, with which the republic was in travail, through numerous episodes of the war like "One More Shot," "The Wounded Scout," &c., to the scene of reconstruction in "Taking the Oath" and of the rescue of the blacks from ignorance only less oppressive than slavery in "Uncle Ned's School," Rogers's penetrating sympathy with the deep pervading sentiment made him a remarkable exponent of his time. Later he undertook larger work, such as the equestrian statue of General Reynolds in Philadelphia, but it is by these intimate compositions, most of which were cast in bronze, and by like ones dealing with simple popular life, that he was most widely known, and by which his memory will live.

E. WINCHESTER DONALD was born in 1848 of Scotch parents in Andover, Mass., which, by a curious coincidence, was also the birthplace of his predecessor at the Church of the Ascension, Dr. John Cotton Smith, and of his predecessor at Trinity Church, Boston, Dr. Philips Brooks. He was a graduate of Amherst, and studied for the ministry in the Divinity School of Philadelphia, and the Union Theological Seminary. Eighteen of the thirty years of his active work were spent in this city at the Church of the Intercession and the Church of the Ascension. Twelve years ago he was called to Trinity Church, Boston. He was admirably adapted by nature and training for his vocation. His heart, as well as his mind, was alert, sympathetic, energetic. His hold on men of all classes was close and firm. With a peculiarly kind and candid bearing he gave the impression of essential sincerity and penetration of judgment, of constant seriousness of purpose, a spirit catholic, generous, and helpful towards others, uncompromising with himself. He was for four years previous to 1896 a University preacher at Harvard, and in the latter year delivered the Lowell lectures which were afterward published with the title of The Expansion of Religion. His influence in the pulpit and in personal intercourse is widely acknowledged to have been intimate and helpful. Socially, he was a refreshing companion, with a charm constantly renewed.

SAMUEL PUTNAM AVERY had been for nearly forty years one of the Century brotherhood, and none among us in that time more richly filled the constitutional qualification in his love of letters and of art. An old New Yorker, born here of New England parentage eighty-three years ago, he was closely and efficiently associated with a great number of the organizations for the enjoyment and promotion of these interests. In his youth he was an engraver on copper and on wood; then he became a publisher and illustrator, then a dealer and collector, and gradually a connoisseur, and was through all an intelligent and appreciative student and lover of art. It was through his agency and guidance that many of the fine private collections of this and other cities—notably those of the late Mr. Vanderbilt and Mr. Walters—were enriched, especially in the line of the old Dutch masters and modern French landscape. His success in his profession—it may be called one—was due to his thoroughly trained judgment, his delicate and sure taste, and the courage of his convictions. He was himself a passionate but careful and systematic collector, and a most generous benefactor. His collection of some seventeen thousand prints, representing the labors of an ordinary lifetime, was given to the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox, and Tilden foundations. Columbia has what is probably the best architectural library in the country, given by him as a memorial of his son. The Teachers College received from him a valuable library in memory of a daughter. He gave many precious volumes to the Academy of Medicine. His Oriental Collection is in the Metropolitan Museum. He was a frequent contributor to the Century Club. In every organization of the many with which he was connected—the Metropolitan Museum, the Public Library, the Grolier Club, the Sculpture Society, the Civil Service Reform Association,—he gave, with wonderful liberality, his counsel and aid, even more valuable than his other gifts. Quiet, modest, and retiring in his disposition, one needed to know him well to realize the breadth and refinement of his culture, the soundness and sureness of his judgment, the tenderness of his heart, the gentle firmness of his fidelity to high standards.

Professor CHARLES W. SHIELDS, at the time of his death had held for nearly forty years the chair of Harmony of Science and Revealed Religion at Princeton University, whence he was graduated in 1844, and from the Theological Seminary four years later. He was particularly known for his earnest advocacy of church union, holding that the historic churches of the Reformation—the Lutheran, the Reformed, the Presbyterian, the Protestant Episcopal—were in a sense integral parts of the Church Catholic, and should be united in this country. He was the author of a number of books in the line of his teaching, chief among which were his Religion and Science in Relation to Philosophy, Philosophia Ultima, The Order of the Sciences, and Essays on Christian Unity. He was a man of independent judgment, vigorous intellect and soul, as well as attractive character.

IRA DAVENPORT was a man of large wealth, public spirit, and a keen interest in public affairs. He was a resident of Bath, N. Y., was for two terms a member of the State Senate, for two terms Comptroller of the State of New York, and afterwards a member of Congress. In all these positions his unselfish devotion to duty and his efficiency won for him the cordial respect of all who knew him.

BENJAMIN PERKINS was a worthy representative of the type of the cultured American merchant. He was born at Boston and was educated at the well-known Latin School at Salem, Mass. His tastes and inclination were, however, not towards a professional career, and he preferred to engage in commercial pursuits. In his early manhood he became connected with a business house and was sent to the island of Mauritius, where he lived for many years and where he became imbued with "the spirit of the East." He was proficient in knowledge of oriental art and was a recognized authority on all subjects associated with East Indian, Japanese, and Chinese bronzes, enamels, and porcelains. He had also a considerable acquaintance with oriental literature. On his return to America, he became a member of the firm of S. & W. Welsh, of Philadelphia, whose extensive commercial relations with the East and with South America are well known. He continued a member of that firm for many years, until on leaving it he became President of the Continental Bank of the City of New York. He was connected with charitable institutions and with some of the great corporations in the city of New York and the value of his service to them was great. He was a lover of art and a judicious art critic and the possessor of many valuable paintings. He was genial and kindly and particularly generous to artists. For some years many of his leisure hours were passed in this club house, but latterly his health was feeble and he was seldom here.

Another of the "old New Yorkers" on The Century's list of members dying within the year was ISAAC S. PLATT, who was born in this city in 1834. He was almost a pioneer in the now world-known industry of the manufacture of agricultural machinery, and at the time of his death was President of the corporation of Adirance, Platt & Co., whose office he had visited every working day for half a century. Despite his rare assiduity in business, he found time for active work in a number of charitable and philanthropic institutions. He was also a member of the Mendelssohn Glee Club, and of the American Museum of Natural History.

Dr. THOMAS M. DROWN, President of Lehigh University, had a varied and notable career as a chemist and mining engineer. Born in Philadelphia in 1842, he studied medicine at the University of Pennsylvania and practised for a short time, but soon turned to the study of chemistry and metallurgy, which he pursued at Yale and Harvard and at Freiburg and Heidelberg. After some years of practice in analytic chemistry he was, successively, professor at Lafayette College, secretary of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, head of the department of chemistry in the Boston Institute of Technology, chemist to the State Board of Health of Massachusetts, and president of Lehigh. In both metallurgy and sanitary chemistry, Dr. Drown was an acknowledged authority.

HUGH SMITH THOMPSON was of the finest type of the Southern gentleman. Born in 1836, of a family prominent in the affairs of his state, South Carolina, and in those of the nation, he was, at the outbreak of the Civil War, professor of French and belles-lettres at the Arsenal Academy, at Columbia, and served as Captain of the State Cadets. At the close of the war he resumed his profession, and in 1876 was elected State Superintendent of Schools, which position he held with great credit for six years, manfully doing the best that could be done with the pitifully limited resources at his command, steadily extending the schools and securing their support by local taxation, then a novel method in the South. In 1882, he was elected Governor of South Carolina and served for two terms. He entered the national service as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, under President Cleveland, and at the close of his administration was appointed by President Harrison to the Civil Service Commission, where his contribution to the establishment and extension of the merit system was intelligent and substantial.

In 1892, he retired from the public service to become Controller of the New York Life Insurance Company. Absorbing business cares and delicate health prevented Mr. Thompson from frequent attendance at The Century, but he leaves here a large circle of warm friends with whom affectionate appreciation of his winning personal qualities is joined to hearty respect for his sterling and enlightened service in his varied public career.

There was no face more familiar or more welcome in the rooms of The Century than that of our kindly, faithful friend, HORACE W. ROBBINS. For more than forty years, since he joined the club, a lad of twenty-one, he was a sympathetic and constant participant in its pleasures and duties, and his relation to it was marked by that sense of balance between duty and pleasure essential to the clubable man. Mr. Robbins was born in Mobile, Ala., in 1842, and was graduated from Newton University, Baltimore, in 1860, whence he removed to New York, serving in the 22d New York Regiment in the Harper's Ferry campaign of 1862. Later he took up the study of art, which he pursued for three years in Paris. His associations in this country were with the "Hudson River School," of which James Hart and F. E. Church were leaders of influence and distinction, and Mr. Robbins earned a creditable place in the landscape art of that time. He was long and actively connected with the National Academy of Design, of which he became a full member in 1878, subsequently acting as secretary for ten years, and as First Vice-President for several years. When nearly fifty, he took the unusual step from art to law and was admitted to the bar in 1892. His remaining years were devoted to that profession and to the care of several estates. In the management of the affairs of The Century he took an active part in many offices, and always loyally. He is sadly missed.

EDWARD TUCKERMAN POTTER came of a family, which The Century has reason to hold in especial regard. A graduate of Union College, of which his grandfather, Dr. Nott, was the well-known President. He chose the profession of Architecture in which he did work of recognized distinction. The Church of the Heavenly Rest, in this city, being an example of his early work in which effect of marked excellence is obtained under peculiar difficulties.

W. T. P.

St. John's Church, Yonkers, and the church and parish house at Hartford, Conn., constituting the Colt Memorial, show his riper style and his peculiar mastery of color harmony through the use of stone of various hue. Mr. Potter retired sometime before his death from the active practice of his profession, passing much of his time abroad and for the last decade, at his home in Newport. He had a strong love for music and was a composer in a variety of forms, the beauty and originality of which are recognized by experts. But during years of apparent leisure he devoted much time and labor to the study of the complex problem of better housing of the poor. Of this interesting phase of his career, his friend, Mr. A. J. Bloor, writes: "He was a great inventor, who had devoted most of his adult years not to securing commissions giving him opportunities to gratify his taste and talent for the production of fine architecture, ecclesiastical, domestic or (and best paying) the financial sky-scraping variety, but for the solution of the momentous problem of how to render feasible the providing of proper homes for the vast majority of all communities, those not rich, the poor, the very poor—homes, whether urban, suburban or rural, by which everything possible, under the unavoidable restrictions of expenditure, local ordinance, site, environment, etc., for the supply of sunlight, thorough draught, heating, cooling and ventilating of quarters, with the privacy and convenience of their occupants, has been thoroughly thought out and planned."

The same authority describes Mr. Potter's chief invention as "a system of what may almost be called instantaneous building by indefinite multiples of unity of manufactured building materials," and predicts for it an effect little short of revolutionary. Those who knew Mr. Potter's profound attachment to high ideals and the fidelity and unselfishness with which he pursued them, may well see in the realization of his friend's prediction the reward that would be most satisfying to his loyal and lofty spirit.

GEORGE BLAGDEN, though feeble health has for some years kept him away, was in former years a familiar figure in the rooms of The Century, of which he had been a member more than thirty years. Of New England birth, and a graduate of Harvard, he early entered the banking business, in this city and was for a long time a member of the firm of Clark, Dodge, & Co. He was active in charitable work, especially that of the time-honored Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor of which he was for many years a manager. His kindly disposition and sterling character won for him a large circle of friends in The Century, where his memory is cordially cherished.

The current of Club life has flowed very tranquilly during the past year. The cheerful excess of receipts over outlay in the daily business of the Club, already noted, has been devoted to the establishment of a new and improved lighting system. The process has necessarily been somewhat disturbing, but it has been borne patiently, or with no more grumbling than is required—adopting a mot from the household of one of our most faithful members,—to preserve the “home-like” spirit of our Association. Stirring events outside have but contributed to the interest of discussion in our informal forum. The quadrennial electoral contest which, only sixty days past, does not, in retrospect, seem like much of a contest—leaves the Century still represented in the White House, in the conduct of Foreign Affairs, and in the two great embassies, whence two of our members will shortly return to be replaced by others. The esoteric operations of the party organization have insured his seat in the U. S. Senate to still another of our members for a second term. The St. Louis Exposition brought to our house an unusual number of distinguished and delightful guests from all parts of the Union and from other lands. Our losses from death have been less even than last year, though the membership has increased. The omens are auspicious for another happy year.

ARTICLE VI.

OF THE MEMBERS.

SECTION 1. The number of resident members is limited to one thousand.

SEC. 2. Any member who, having paid the entrance fee and the dues for one year, is absent from the United States for a continuous period of not less than twelve months, shall, during his absence, be exempt from the payment of dues, provided that he shall have given to the Treasurer previous notice in writing of his intention to be absent. Absentees shall not be counted in the limitation of the number of resident members. In case the return of absentees shall increase the number above the limit prescribed, no new resident members shall be chosen until the number shall be reduced by resignation or otherwise below such limit.

SEC. 3. There shall also be a class of non-resident members, not exceeding three hundred in number, to consist of persons residing permanently more than fifty miles from the New York City Hall, and having no office nor place of business in New York.

All officers of the Army and Navy, who are now members, or who may be elected to membership, may at their option be held to be non-resident members during the tenure of their commissions. [Adopted Nov. 4th, 1899; and Oct. 6th, 1900.]

SEC. 4. No person shall be admitted as a member of the Association unless he shall have been recommended by the Committee on Admissions, on the proposal of two members not belonging to that Committee.

The name of every person proposed for admission, whether as a resident or a non-resident member, with his residence and the names of the members proposing him, shall be posted in the rooms, at least fifteen days before being acted upon by the Committee. The Committee shall receive and consider all communications in reference to the persons proposed, and make careful examination as to their qualifications; it shall pass upon each name separately, and two negative votes shall be a rejection of the candidate. The proceedings of the Committee shall be secret and confidential.

At every monthly meeting of the Association the Committee shall furnish printed lists, properly classified, of the names of the persons recommended for admission, not exceeding twenty in number, and the Association shall then proceed to vote by depositing the lists with tellers appointed by the Chairman. The erasure from the list of any name shall be considered a vote in the negative, and such negative votes to the number of one-fifth of the votes cast shall exclude from membership the person against whom they are cast.

No person so excluded shall be eligible for election within twelve months thereafter.

SEC. 5. Non-resident members may, at any time, on and after the 30th April, 1896, be transferred from the list of resident members upon application in writing to the Treasurer. The members so transferred shall not be entitled to reimbursement of any part of the entrance fee. [Amended February, 1896.]

Non-resident members shall be entitled to all the privileges of the Association, except the right of voting and of holding office. They shall be subject to the Constitution and By-Laws and to all the regulations of the Association.

SEC. 6. The Secretary and Treasurer, two weeks previous to each monthly meeting, shall determine the number of vacancies in each class of members and certify the same to the Committee on Admissions.

SEC. 7. An entrance fee of one hundred and fifty dollars shall be paid by each resident member, and of one hundred dollars by each non-resident member. Such payments shall be made within thirty days after notice in writing of the election, and in default of such payment the member shall be deemed to have declined his election.

SEC. 8. The annual dues of resident members shall be sixty dollars, payable semi-annually in advance on the first days of May and November; and the annual dues of non-resident members shall be thirty dollars, payable on admission, and on each first day of May thereafter.

The dues of all newly-elected members shall be computed proportionally from the first day of the month succeeding their election. [First two paragraphs adopted October 7th, 1899.]

When the dues of any member shall remain unpaid for the space of three months, the Treasurer shall cause him to be notified that, unless the same be paid within one month thereafter, his membership will cease; and in case such dues shall not be paid pursuant to such notice, or such default be accounted for to the Board of Management, he shall thereupon cease to be a member.

In case any member elected to the non-resident class shall come to reside within the radius before named, or shall establish an office or place of business in the City of New York, it shall be his duty forthwith to notify the Treasurer of the Association in writing of such change, and he shall then be deemed a resident member with annual dues accordingly, and he shall also pay to the Treasurer within thirty days the additional amount of entrance fee necessary to constitute him a resident member; in default of such payment he shall cease to be a member.

It shall be the duty of each member to keep the Treasurer informed of his address. [Adopted April 1st, 1899.]

SEC. 9. Honorary members may be elected from the membership of the Association on the recommendation of the Board of Management, at a regular monthly meeting, by unanimous vote by ballot. No more than one honorary member shall be chosen in any one year. Honorary members shall be exempt from the payment of annual dues and shall be entitled to all the privileges of the Association except that of holding office.

SEC. 10. Any member may be suspended or expelled for violation of the Constitution or By-Laws, or for any offence or misconduct which may be deemed sufficient to warrant such suspension or expulsion, by a vote, at a monthly meeting, of three-fourths of the members present, one month's previous notice having been given to the member charged. It shall be the duty of the Board of Management to report any member for action under this rule.

The Board of Management shall also have the power for a like cause, by the affirmative vote of eleven (11) of its members, after a hearing has been granted on one month's previous notice, to suspend any member from all privileges as such member indefinitely, pending further action; but any member affected thereby may require the resolution of suspension to be reported to the Association. [Adopted May 7th, 1898.]

Membership may also be forfeited by failure to pay any indebtedness to the Association, in such manner as may be prescribed by the By-Laws.

SEC. 11. No card playing shall be allowed in the rooms of the Association, and betting of any kind is strictly prohibited.

ARTICLE VII.

OF MEETINGS.

SEC. 2. There shall be monthly meetings of the Association, for the election of members and other business. They shall be held on the first Saturday of each month (except January, July, and August), at 9 o'clock p. m. [Amended March 3d, 1900.]

SEC. 3. Special meetings may be called by the Board of Management; and they shall call a meeting at any time on the written request of ten members, which request shall specify the object of the meeting.

ARTICLE VIII.

OF AMENDMENTS, ETC.

SECTION 1. This Constitution shall commence and take effect on the second Saturday of January, 1870, and the previous Constitution thereupon shall cease.

SEC. 2. No alteration or amendment of this Constitution shall be made unless the same be proposed at a previous regular meeting, and then posted in a conspicuous place in the rooms of the Association, and be finally adopted at a subsequent meeting by the votes of two-thirds of the members present at the passage thereof.

SEC. 3. By-Laws, Rules, and Regulations, not inconsistent with the Charter or this Constitution, may be made, adopted, altered or repealed at any monthly or annual meeting: provided, the proposed by-law, rule, regulation, alteration or repeal, shall have been proposed at a previous monthly meeting, and then posted in a conspicuous place in the rooms of the Association, and shall be adopted by the votes of two-thirds of the members present at the passage thereof.

BY-LAWS

SECTION 1. No book, journal, paper, picture, statue, or other work of art, the property of the Association, shall be taken from the rooms, under any pretext whatever, except by authority of the Board of Management.

SEC. 2. On the first day of each month, or as soon thereafter as may be practicable, there shall be sent to each member notice of his indebtedness to the Association on the last day of the preceding month, and if the same is not paid on or before the fifteenth day of the month the names of the members so in default, together with the amounts due, shall be posted on a separate sheet in the hall, and such members shall be refused further credit until their indebtedness is discharged.

In case any such indebtedness shall not be discharged at the expiration of a month from the date of such first notice, a second notice shall be mailed to the member in default, notifying him thereof, and that in case he continues in such default for ten days thereafter, he will be excluded from all privileges of the Association until such indebtedness is paid, and such member shall thereupon, upon the expiration of such ten days, be so excluded, and notice to that effect shall thereupon be posted on a separate sheet in the hall.

At any time during such exclusion the Board of Management may declare the membership of such delinquent to be forfeited, and his name shall thereupon be dropped from the roll of members.

But before such action shall be taken by the Board of Management, it shall cause a copy of this By-Law to be mailed to the delinquent member. [Last two paragraphs adopted April, 1895.]

A copy of this By-Law shall be sent with such second notice.

SEC. 3. A suggestion book shall be kept at the rooms, in which every member is authorized to enter, under his signature, any complaint as to the management of the Association, and any suggestions he may desire to make.

SEC. 4. Any member may personally introduce visitors to the rooms of the Association as provided in this Section, but not otherwise.

The name and address of each visitor, together with the personal signature of the member introducing him, shall be entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, immediately upon the introduction of such visitor into the building, and such visitor shall not be admitted to any part of the House, except the reception room on the first floor, until such entry has been made.

No member shall introduce more than one visitor on the same day.

No person who has been introduced as a visitor under the provisions of this Section shall be introduced again by the same member during the same calendar year, except upon a card first obtained from the House Committee. A list containing the names and addresses of all persons to whom such cards are issued, and the names of the members requesting the same, shall be kept by the House Committee; and no card shall be issued to any visitor until at least one month has elapsed since his last introduction.

At monthly or annual meetings no visitor shall be introduced, unless he is first provided with a card of admission, obtained from the House Committee, and signed by a member of the Association, and no one residing in the City of New York, or within twenty-five miles thereof, shall be admitted to any such meeting oftener than once in any calendar year, except by the consent of the Board of Management. The House Committee shall keep a list of all such cards issued, similar to that provided for in the preceding subdivision; and not more than one card shall be issued to the same member for any one meeting.

In case of violation of any of the provisions of this Section the House Committee may summarily suspend the privileges accorded therein, with regard to any member or visitor, for a period not exceeding ten days; and in all cases of violation the Board of Management may suspend such privileges for such periods as, in their discretion, the interests of the Association may require. In cases of suspension, notice in writing, signed by the Secretary of the House Committee, or the Secretary of the Board of Management, shall be mailed to each person affected thereby at his last known address; and such suspension shall take effect from the time of such mailing.

It shall be the duty of the House Committee to enforce the provisions of this Section, and promptly to report to the Board of Management for its action all cases of persistent violation thereof.

On the four days following a monthly meeting, between the hours of twelve, noon, and four in the afternoon, visitors may be admitted to the picture gallery only, on presenting a card signed by a member.

A list containing the names and addresses of all persons holding cards entitling them to partake of the privileges of the Association for a longer period than one day, with the dates of the issuance and expiration of such cards, shall be kept posted by the House Committee in the rooms of the Association, and shall be corrected from day to day, as changes occur.
